ABSTRACT

This directory was designed to help students with learning disabilities understand the types of college programs and services available to them so they can match their needs with what each school offers. Over 600 colleges and universities are profiled, divided into two sections: colleges and universities that have programs, and colleges and universities that offer services. In both sections, schools are arranged alphabetically by state. Information provided for each program includes: learning disability program name, address, and telephone number; application information; rating of importance of factors from applicants' secondary schools; test requirements; general information on campus setting, academic program, and student life; sports/activities; enrollment; learning disability program staff information; specific services; academic adjustments; diagnostic testing available; tutoring offered; unique characteristics of the program; and majors. Appendices contain tables listing individual colleges and the most important college admission factors from applicant's secondary school background; test requirements; deficits served; special services, special aids, and academic adjustments; and tutorials offered. PREFACE

The author hopes that parents, students, educators, and social service consultants will find this Schoolsearch Guide a valuable aid in selecting colleges for students who have been classified as having learning disabilities. In the course of her counseling activities, the author found that searching for the most appropriate college for a student with a specific learning disability was often a very frustrating and time-consuming task.

The author's book, The Schoolsearch Guide to Private Schools for Students with Learning Disabilities, made available to parents and educators programs for pre-schoolers through secondary school. In order to assist those who were seeking post secondary schools, Dr. Lipkin did a thorough search of more than 3,000 colleges, junior colleges, and community colleges to determine the scope of programs and services that are available to high school graduates. Because the The Schoolsearch Guide to Private Schools for Students with Learning Disabilities was so successful and because many of the these students were now looking for college placements, she extended her research to include colleges. The current volume, The Schoolsearch Guide to Colleges with Programs and Services for Students with Learning Disabilities, covers more than 600 colleges and universities.

The author hopes that this book, based on her independent research and analysis, will make the student-school matching task much easier for everyone concerned. She also welcomes suggestions from the readers on additional schools and school criteria that should be considered for inclusion in future editions of her work.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I would like to thank a number of people who assisted me in making this book possible. My appreciation to Lucky Melanson for her dedication, her long hours of work, and her feeling that no job was neither too large nor too small; Kevin Devine for editing and promoting my books; Richard Brawley who spent many endless hours assisting me in designing these forms and seeing this project from its conception to its completion; Tina Chomka for her creative cover design; Deborah Seresky for her many hours of verifying information; and a special thanks to my mother who was so encouraging. A very special thanks to my husband, Alton, my children, Stephen, Deborah, Amy, Peter, Janet, and my grandchildren, Todd and Michelle for understanding the magnitude of this project. Without their patience and understanding, this book never would have gone to press.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

The information in this book was compiled by Dr. Midge Lipkin to fill a critical information gap she encountered in the course of her educational consulting practice. In assisting clients with the school placement process, she found that they needed access to an easily understood, accessible source of data that enabled them to assess, on statistically comparable bases, the merits and possibilities of attending various colleges and universities that accept students with learning disabilities.

Midge Lipkin's current practice focuses on three specialities: neuro-psychological evaluation, therapeutic educational tutoring, and school counseling. As a neuro-psychological evaluator, she conducts in-depth evaluations to determine academic levels and prescribes educational plans to remedy deficits. As a therapeutic educational tutor, she works privately with students with learning disabilities as well as with gifted students who need more academic stimulation.

In recent years, Dr. Lipkin's major emphasis has become school counseling. Through Schoolsearch, she provides direct assistance with all phases of the elementary, secondary school, and college selection and placement process. Starting with a detailed analysis of students' objectives, needs, and credentials, she helps them evaluate potential schools and then guides them through each of the application and follow-up stages.

Dr. Lipkin has more than 30 years experience in the field of education. Some of her professional assignments have been:

- Psychoeducational Advisor, Learning Impairment Training Program, Division of Child Psychiatry, New England Medical Center
- Director of Dorchester Children's Mini School (private day school for emotionally disturbed and learning disabled children)
- Educational Administrator, Dorchester Mental Health, Children's Clinic
- Instructor/Lecturer on teaching of the Learning Disabled
  - Assumption College
  - Boston College
  - Boston University
  - Lesley College
  - Perkins School for the Blind
- Supervisor and Teacher in programs for the learning disabled in the Winchester, Winthrop, Waltham, Sudbury, and Newton, Massachusetts, public school systems

In addition to her Ph.D. in School Administration and Special Education, Lipkin has earned a Certificate for Specific Language Disability from the Massachusetts General Hospital. She also holds a M.A. in Education from Boston University and a B.S. from Lesley College.

Dr. Lipkin is also the author and publisher of The School Search Guide to Private Schools in the Northeast and The School Search Guide To Private Schools For Students With Learning Disabilities.

INTRODUCTION

Students classified as "learning disabled" have been attending colleges and universities for many years. Before advances in our understanding of learning disabilities, these students were often thought to be lazy or uninterested, avoiding tasks other students readily accepted. Little attention was given to the student to understand why he or she was not succeeding.

Fortunately, we have developed over a time a clearer and more compassionate understanding of learning disabilities and how they affect students' performance in the classroom and in life. Current diagnostic testing methods can pinpoint exactly what a student's deficits are and experts can determine how best to deal with that student's learning "styles".

This better understanding, coupled with federal legislation guaranteeing their rights to equal opportunities in education, means students with learning disabilities are now succeeding in higher education through the use of a variety of compensatory skills, classroom aids, and special services. When they leave college, they enter and succeed in business, industry, and professions.

Under the guidance of Dr. Gertrude Webb, Curry College, Milton, Massachusetts, became the first college to offer a comprehensive program for students with learning disabilities in 1970. Since then, hundreds of others have followed Curry's lead by creating programs or offering services.

The colleges and universities in this guide offer an almost infinitely wide range of programs and services. The key is for students and their parents or guidance counselors to know what the student's strengths and weaknesses are and to determine his or her needs before beginning the school search process.

Unfortunately, students with learning disabilities assume they can attend any college or university that has a program or offers services. This is not the case. Because this misconception is so widespread, I felt compelled to write this book. It will help students to match their strengths and weaknesses with the criteria and academic programs at various schools. Students with learning disabilities must realize that in order to enroll in a college or university that offers such services, they must meet the admissions standards set by that school.

To collect the data on the schools in this book, surveys were mailed to more than 3,000 colleges and universities. Telephone conversations with officials from responding schools were then made to verify the information sent back. All of the information in this guide is based on the 1990-1991 academic year.

CHAPTER 1

How to Use This Book

Opportunities abound for education beyond high school. Today's post-secondary school students are earning certificates and degrees in academic fields that are as varied as the students applying to them. Students with learning disabilities are no exception, but choosing which college to attend can be a difficult and time consuming task, unless you have the right tools.

This book was designed to help students understand the types of programs and services available so they can match their needs with what each school offers.

This guide does not rate or rank schools. The information contained in the profiles was provided by admissions directors, learning disabilities program directors, or another official at each school. Each profile also contains a brief statement in the words of the school official who provided the information on what makes their program or services distinct from all others.

Most students with learning disabilities and their parents are keenly aware of their social and academic strengths and weaknesses, and many have received ongoing guidance and academic counseling throughout high school. As a result, they may already have a set criteria of what they are looking for in higher education. Those students and parents who have additional questions or find themselves in need of additional information should consult with the guidance department at their high school or with a private guidance or education counselor.

The more than 600 colleges and universities profiled in this book are divided into two distinct sections

*__Section__ 1. Colleges and Universities that have programs for students with learning disabilities.

*__Section__ 2. Colleges and Universities that offer services for students with learning disabilities.

In both sections, schools are arranged alphabetically by state. The index lists all schools in alphabetical order. Appendices cross-refer schools by a variety of criteria, such as: deficits served, tutorial services, academic adjustments, and admissions criteria.

College and the Student with Learning Disabilities

Students with learning disabilities are succeeding in every subject from anthropology to zoology at community colleges and prestigious universities across the country. Some colleges and universities have special programs tailored to meet the needs of students. Others have wide-ranging services designed to help these students achieve academic success.

Some schools, however, make no special effort to help students with learning disabilities, but all schools share one feature: they must provide equal access to admissions to all students regardless of handicap.

The Law and the Learning Disabled Student

Public Law 94-142, the Handicapped Children Act of 1975, mandates all states to provide a free and adequate education for all children, regardless of handicap, through the secondary level. It also contains the official legal definition of "learning disability":

> Specific learning disability means a disorder in one or more of the basic psychological processes involved in understanding or using language, spoken or written, which may manifest itself in an imperfect ability to listen, think, speak, read, write, spell, or to do mathematical calculations. The term includes such conditions as perceptual handicaps, brain injury, minimal brain dysfunction, dyslexia, and developmental aphasia. The term does not include children who have learning problems that are primarily the result of visual, hearing, or motor handicaps, of mental retardation, of emotional disturbance, or of environmental, cultural, or economic disadvantage.

Simply stated, a student has a learning disability if there is a discrepancy between his or her innate or cognitive ability and his or her performance in school in any of the following seven areas: listening, thinking, speaking, reading, writing, spelling or performing mathematical calculations. Because the law mandates school districts to provide educational opportunities for students with learning disabilities through secondary school, more and more students with learning disabilities are now graduating from high school who are qualified for college. Further legislation ensures that students with learning disabilities have equal access to higher education.

Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, effectively bars discrimination in areas of recruitment, hiring, and classification of individuals by any institution receiving federal funds. For students with learning disabilities, this act prohibits colleges and universities from denying them admission solely because they have a learning disability but otherwise meet the school's established admission criteria. Taken together, these two laws (PL 94-142 and Section 504) insure that the doors of higher education will not be shut on students merely because they have a disability.

However, not all schools with programs for students with learning disabilities use the same definition of "learning disability" beyond that contained in P.L. 94-142. For instance, some schools accept students with a broader range of learning deficits into their learning disabilities program than .

On the other hand, even if students with learning disabilities qualify for a "most selective" or "highly selective" schools, they may nonetheless choose a less competitive college or university that has a more comprehensive program where they will benefit from more direct assistance and remedial or tutorial programs.

Admissions Policies and Practices

The information provided by the schools on their admissions policies reflects each school's overall policy. Students who fail to meet certain criteria in a particular school's admissions policy need not automatically check that school off their list of potential colleges to attend. Most schools base their admissions decisions on a wide range of factors including, test scores, high school class rank, and personal profiles or interviews. Students who are weak in some areas and do not meet a school's test score requirements may still be considered for admission by that school if they have demonstrated strengths in other areas which that school considers important.

Most colleges and universities have either open admissions or selective admissions. "Open admissions" means that any student with a high school diploma or its equivalent is eligible to enroll. Many junior colleges and community colleges have open admissions.

"Selective Admissions" means that a school uses a set of established criteria in evaluating each applicant for admission. The criteria may include standardized test scores above a certain percentile or, for example, a 3.5 high school G.P.A. Most schools with selective admissions evaluate an applicant on a variety of factors, so a student whose standardized test scores are below the school's stated cut-off point may still be considered for admission if he or she has strong credentials in other areas, such as class rank or recommendations.

Regardless of whether a school has an open or selective admissions policy, students must keep in mind the application deadline. Some schools, however, do not have an application deadline. These schools have what is known as rolling admissions. Schools with rolling admissions may, nonetheless, have a selective admissions policy.

Many colleges with programs for students with learning disabilities require applicants to apply directly to the school's Learning Disability Program. In that case, students may be judged by different standards than those used for students without learning disabilities.

Some colleges and universities also require LD students to apply a number of months in advance of the regular application deadline, and many schools require students with learning disabilities to submit a statement of deficit or some other proof of their learning disability with their application.

Students with learning disabilities should discuss their options on standardized tests, such as timed or untimed Scholastic Aptitude Tests (SATs), or The American College Test, (ACT) well in advance of the college application process with their guidance counselor. Some schools require applicants to take various diagnostic tests, such as the WAIS-R, or the Woodcock-Johnson Psycho-educational Battery.

Programs or Services

Each school's Learning Disability Program is a little different from every other school's, and one school's LD program may be another's LD services.

There are a number of differences between programs and services. For schools with programs, the admissions procedure is often different for a student with learning disabilities. Many schools require that a student first apply to the general program, and if that college suspects that the student has a disability or if a statement has accompanied their application verifying a learning disability, then the student is referred to the learning disability department. The department then determines if the student qualifies for their program and if their deficits can be handled. Although most colleges request that students take timed SAT or ACT tests, a second untimed testing is often suggested. Often times a neuroeducational battery of tests is suggested so that the staff can better understand the student's deficits.

Programs usually have a staff specially trained to remediate deficits as well as assist students in developing compensatory skills to help them deal with their deficits. Some programs require students to attend a pre-freshman orientation to acclimate themselves to the rigorous pace of college. An advocate often assists these students in course selection and meets with individual professors in an effort to help them understand the needs of each student. Programs are often diagnostic and prescribe an educational plan for the student. Tutoring is often a key component of LD Programs.

Services are often forms of academic assistance that colleges and universities make available to all students, not just students with learning disabilities, such as tutoring and counseling. Services for students with learning disabilities, however, may focus more on compensating for deficits. A student who applies to a school that has services for students with learning disabilities will be judged by the same standards as all other applicants. Once they are accepted and enrolled, however, they may avail themselves of the services offered in order to succeed in the mainstream academic curriculum.

Some schools with services for students with learning disabilities also have learning centers staffed by trained specialists. There is sometimes a charge for using these services.

Many schools with either a program or services may also offer certain in-class academic adjustments designed to help students with learning disabilities succeed. Academic adjustments may include: schedule modifications; special services like take-home tests, oral exams, or notetakers; and special aids, such as tape recorders and word processors. Each school's general policy on these adjustments is listed in its profile, however, individual instructors and departments may have different policies.

General Information

The "General Information" section of each college or university profile offers an overview of campus life at the school: ratio of men to women; percentage of foreign students; campus milieu and environs; proximity to transportation and major cities; beaches and ski areas; fraternity and sorority life; availability of student housing; and rules regarding cars on campus. More detailed information about a school can be learned by contacting the school's admissions office and asking for a catalogue and other information materials. Once a student has narrowed the scope of the school search, a visit to a prospective school while school is in session is the best way to see what a school is really like.

Tuition and Expenses

The "Expenses" section of each profile includes the cost of tuition, room and board, books (when applicable) and learning disabilities program for the most recent calendar year (1990 - 1991). These numbers are subject to change by schools without notice. Note that at some schools, students enrolled in the LD program may have additional expenses above and beyond the standard tuition costs. A word about financial aid: the cost of higher education is indeed high--and it continues to rise. Financial aid, however, is available from a variety of sources, depending on one's need and one's willingness to search. Colleges admissions personnel can refer an applicant or a student upon acceptance to the school's financial aid office. High school and private guidance counselors are also a great source of information.

What Makes Us Unique?

The "What Makes Us Unique" section of each college or university profile is a special feature of The Schoolsearch Guide. These were written by an official from each responding college or university. They sum up the school's philosophy and character, providing prospective students, parents, and guidance counselors with a sense of the school's commitment to students with learning disabilities and the place these students hold in the school's academic and social community.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Students attending UAB with a documented learning disability are interviewed by a specialist to determine individual program needs. Assistance is given in securing tutors and books on tape, scribing tests, testing referral, advocating needs such as untimed or oral tests, and individual counseling. A WLD support group meets near the campus.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The Jones Learning Center provides a unique opportunity for college-age students who have been diagnosed as having specific learning disabilities. We have designed the Learning Center Program to emphasize the University as a total learning environment. Our college community is small enough to be cohesive, allowing our staff to collaborate more closely to achieve our goals.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Our LD Program is integrated into the Disabled Student Services office. We are also a vital part of Student Academic Services. Due to our emphasis upon intensive academic advisement, many of our students are also actively involved in academic, career, social, and political organizations. By making them better advocates, they are capable of a more balanced university education and experience. We serve over 300 LD students in every major on campus, including graduate and credential programs.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Our goal is that all aspects of university life will be conducive to the physical, social and intellectual growth of all students. Therefore we work with the faculty and administration to promote accessibility of programs and facilities for students with disabilities, and we work with students to help them achieve their potential in this setting. We will accept students with deficits as long as they meet all other admission requirements.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The LD Program is dedicated to assuring each student an opportunity to experience equity in education. After an assessment is obtained for each student, the staff works with each student to develop compensatory methods for handling assignments and classroom projects. Careful attention is paid to helping the student acquire learning skills and formulating and implementing specific strategies for notetaking and management of written materials. The emphasis is on aiding the LD student to find techniques to deal with his/her disability in the university setting and thereafter in the job market.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Canada College is a small community college where students receive attention needed to achieve their academic goals. The Learning Disabilities Program offers individual attention with the goal of providing the support which students need to be successful. Our goal for our students is to develop skills and strategies which will allow them to be successful students and independent learners. Canada College is one of 107 California Community Colleges. Standards of eligibility are statewide so that once a student is determined eligible he/she may receive services at any California Community College.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The Learning Skills Program at Chabot has been in existence for over 15 years. Classes are actual college classes whereby students receive college credits for attendance and completion; they are not tutoring sessions. The Learning Skills Program meets the needs of students in ways that general remedial courses cannot due to the specialty and variety of the disability.

What Makes Our Program Unique

We are a very small (2nd smallest in CA) community college which offers 1:15 ratio of faculty to students in most classes. In a small town, we know of our students as people, not just in an academic context. There is a very special support network between faculty, staff, current and former LD students.

What Makes Our Program Unique

A student receives services from our STEP program after they have been accepted and enrolled at Foothill and have had a diagnostic evaluation. Our program is three years old, and we are growing in numbers and services. Our special education counselor assists our students with academic schedules and individual counseling. We offer a half unit of credit for work in our center, and if the student has been assigned two periods a week, he or she will receive one full unit. We offer a class in organization and study skills.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The LD program at Hartnell College serves the individual needs of the students. The Educational Skills Lab is available for students who need assistance with basic skills and/or assistance with other classes. Learning disabled students at Hartnell also have access to the college's learning skills program and tutorial services. LD students can be successful at Hartnell because of the varied services available for their individual needs.

What Makes Our Program Unique

At Imperial Valley College the Learning Disability program provides both supportive services and courses to students with learning disabilities. Our program is a refelction of the state program which is a model program for the rest of the country. Each student is assigned to work with an instructional specialist or counselor who provides the student with academic counseling, tutorial services, financial assistance, enrollment in High Tech courses, and other supportive services deemed necessary to meet the student's needs. All of these services are available to students in one central location.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The L.D. program is distinctive due to our mainstream philosophy. We do not offer special classes for remediation of basic skills; that responsibility is assigned to the college's skills center. We do offer our L.D. students the opportunity to join evaluatory classes on learning strategies. We present strategies in the following areas: test taking, sentence writng, error monitoring, first letter mnemonics and self-advicacy. We have seen our L.D. students make splendid progress when utilizing these instructional services. We feel our program is comprehensive and meets the needs of our students.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Our L.D. Program is essentially a support service for students who are enrolled or who will enroll in the college. Strengths and weaknesses are evaluated and specifically addressed through the use of I.E.P.S. We assist the student in obtaining necessary accommodations for mainstream courses as well, which allows our program to be both comprehensive and thorough.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The Santa Monica College Learning Disability Program is geared to students who are enrolled in mainstream college courses. The main emphasis is on teaching students strategies that will help them be competitive, rather than on teaching remedial skills. Students receive a thorough assessment of learning strengths and weaknesses and are assisted in developing an appropriate educational plan. Specialized tutoring is available, as well as training in word processing and computer skills.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Victor Valley College's L.D. Program is a support-based program with very few "special" classes. We offer three classes to students defined as L.D. through California Community College eligibility criteria: one is a support class emphasising communication, self-awareness and self-advocacy; another uses intervention for remediation of basic skills; and one teaches strategies/techniques for learning.

What Makes Our Program Unique

We have a small L.D. Program that works closely with the students in the area of remediation and content area support. Although used for drills, computers are used mainly for word processing and spell checking. Because we are a small school and because we have a small program, we are able to work on a close personal level with our students. We are proud of their many successes.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Faculty is now willing to allow modifications, and the students have formed a Student Handling Group on campus. Creating Healthy Attitudes Together (CHAT) provides peer support groups as well as a buddy system that assists new students. The following year, the students are then a buddy to another incoming student. This system helps new students learn about the facilities around the campus.

What Makes Our Program Unique

LD students first complete the regular admissions process. If they do not meet this criteria, if requested, they will be considered for the LD department. An on-campus diagnostic interview affords us the opportunity to evaluate the student as well as the student to evaluate the university. Our students must attend a special LD orientation in August. All students must only take 12 hours the first two semesters and meet with the LD specialist twice a week. We evaluate a student's ability to use compensatory skills and we expect students to carry the information about their learning style to their instructors.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The Learning Resource Center at Mitchell is a structured academic support program to help students develop college planning skills and strategies for more independent functioning. Because Mitchell is a small, residential two year college geared to low achievers, it is an ideal context for the student who is in need of transition between high school and a four year college.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The Center for Special Academic Support (CSAS) was created to accommodate the special needs of the Learning Disabled and other designated Handicapped Students. CSAS does all that it can to holistically serve these students and to make them as apt to succeed as possible. Each student is served individually, and all information is kept confidential. The entire faculty and staff at De Kalb College tries to make each student feel fortunate to have spent time here.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The purpose of our clinic is to provide diagnostic assessment and direct services to students at the University of Georgia who demonstrate a specific learning disability. The assessment required of all students is used throughout the student's college career to obtain appropriate individual modifications. We encourage students to be independent and help them learn to be self-advocates, yet we are available at all times to help them. We have a good relationship with our faculty and make an effort to educate them about learning disabilities and assist them in working with our students.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The Program for Adult Achievement at Leeward Community College has been re-established as of Fall, 1989. The program is staffed by a Learning Disabilities Specialist and a Counselor (60% time). We anticipate expansion of services, staff and resources over the next few years once the students are better identified and our program becomes established.

What Makes Our Program Unique

We do not have a program, however our services are comprehensive as noted. We individualize our support based upon a student's needs and motivation perhaps as much in direct services, advocacy, etc. as time permits. Our staff are very experienced, excellent with adults and younger students and faculty/staff are supportive of student needs.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Our clinicians are trained in the Lindamood-Bell techniques to help LD students develop auditory conceptual abilities and concept imagery abilities. We provide daily one-on-one clinical sessions for the purpose of affecting some measure of correction of the student's learning disability. Our goal is to totally mainstream the LD student after he or she has participated three semesters in the CHANCE Program.

What Makes Our Program Unique

I.C.E. is a post-secondary program for the student who has a high school diploma, certificate of attendance, G.E.D. or whose peers have graduated from high school. It is a support service designed to assist those who are handicapped when enrolling in a traditional college program. Most students who enroll in I.C.E. would have been identified as disabled in previous educational or vocational programs.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Freshmen attend a class called Learning Strategies both semesters (2 credits each semester-4 credit hours). College reading skills, written expression, current events, a unit on learning disabilities, career development and group-building projects form the content of this course. All students in the program meet with an L.D. staff member for one hour each week for individual instruction/counseling/guidance. L.D. staff members serve as advisors to students until they choose a major (they remain as secondary advisors).

What Makes Our Program Unique

Student Support Services is a federally funded program to serve low income, first generation, and disabled students. Students must document their eligibility for the program. Our success rate is approximately 70% for LD students each semester. After looking at students succeeding, the most important characteristic is motivation, not high test scores for academic success.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The Learning Center Program at Montgomery College was established in 1978 to serve those students with specific learning disabilities who have the motivation and potential for success in regular college classes, but who require special support services because of deficits in basic skills, particularly language skills. The program is designed to assist learning disabled students in the devleopment of effective oral and written communication skills so that they are better prepared to participate in the total college program.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Our program is for students who are motivated to continue their education after high school but who would have difficulty succeeding in a tradtional college program. Through practical courses and field practicum, students develop a variety of skills essential for independent adulthood. Upon graduation, students receive a certificate of completion and six college credits for the vocational component of the program. The twelve month outreach program offers additional support as graduates put to full-time practical use the vocational and independent living skills learned in their course work.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Middlesex offers two options for LD students. One consists of support services for students enrolled in traditional college programs. The goal of these academic and emotional support services is to assist students in becoming independent learners who achieve to their maximum potential. The second option is the transition program, a unique certificate program for lower-functioning LD students. This substantially separate program trains students in the areas of clerical/business support, independent living and personal social skills while placing them on job co-ops.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Our Learning Skills program is two years old and growing. We service handicapped, L.D., and students with no known disabilities. Foreign students who are learning English, deaf, blind, and physically handicapped students all have requested services. Many students receive individual assistance with coursework, from library research to proofreading. Remedial classes and in-services are offered in math, reading, writing, study skills, and learning strategies. Most of the assistance is given by faculty.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The program is based on a cognitive developmental model and includes a coordinator and learning specialists who work closely with students especially in the freshman year. The emphasis is on skill development with special attention paid to reading and study skills, writing, and time management. The learning specialists are trained to administer exams to the students with appropriate modifications in time and format.

What Makes Our Program Unique

We strive for maximum student-advisor contact. We pride ourselves on being the only private four year liberal arts college in Minnesota with a specific program for the support of learning disabled students. Our commitment to diversity has been ahead of its time. We began our program in 1982-83 and have continued to grow. We now have over 75 learning disabled students on campus with a high graduation rate among our students. We are a caring, supportive program that encourages self-advocacy and independence.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Our program is unique insofar as we emphasize study skills rather than working on primary LD problems. We also give individual attention. Time is also spent in CAI labs. Tutors are available. Small classes allow for close interaction socially and academically.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The key to our program is"individuality". We have a small number of L.D. students, therefore, we are able to meet each student's needs. We offer individual sessions as often as needed, texts on tape, study groups, word processing, untimed tests and encourage students to tape record lectures. Since the Academic Resource Center is located in the same building as the Liberal Arts professors and classrooms, the center is convenient for students to drop in and out. The staff at the ARC has a good relationship with the faculty in helping them meet individual needs of students.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Flathead Valley Community College's program for students with a learning disability is an extension of the Learning Center. Professionals in the Learning Center provide a variety of services to LD students. The Academic Reinforcement Center, a component of the Learning Center, provides individual and small group remedial classes. The community college atmosphere enables the students to participate in small classes with more individualized attention. The Advocate for Students with Disabilities meets with students on an individual basis to explore their individual learning programs.

What Makes Our Program Unique

This program is unique because it is completely individualized for LD students. One advisor works with each student. The developmental program is comprehensive and small so that the students receive as much individual help as needed. All services are free to the student, including tutoring, testing, and computer-use. We are a small institution so we can give the extra assistance students need.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Our goal is to help students develop the skills needed to be independent, effective and efficient learners. To this end we focus on self-advocacy (with our support), learning strategies, and accommodations which leave the responsibility with the student (e.g. taped lecture rather than notetaker if possible). We provide 3 levels of service and strive to help the student move toward minimum support.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The admissions process involves: 1) reviewing child study team reports to determine potential as well as achievement, 2) interviewing each applicant; having each perform reading, writing, and mathematical tasks, and 3) consulting with a high school counselor and/or teacher. Accepted students attend a pre-college Summer Orientation Program that provides an intensive orientation to the college, personalized instruction in reading, writing, and math, and instruction in a variety of study strategies necessary for college success.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Our staff is made up of specialists in learning disabilities with years of experience serving college-level LD students, primarily in one-to-one sessions. Both academic and counseling needs are met by a team of providers with certification beyond the Master's level. A diagnostic center is housed at our site. The staff also provides awareness programs for faculty each year.

What Makes Our Program Unique

We provide services in all important areas - academic, interpersonal, and career. We believe our students need to understand how their learning disabilities impact in all these areas of functioning and how they can work best to compensate. Our goal is to help our students become independent - as learners and as human beings.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The Learning Disability Program is very small and individualized. There are approximately 100 students who are high academic risk and approximatley 10 students who are classified as learning disabled out of the 100. All new first-time, full-time students are tested for reading, writing, and math skills. The Special Services Office is a new service at Clinton Community College.

What Makes Our Program Unique

We will be beginning our program in Fall 1990. The program will provide a mentor who will work with 5-8 students who have moderate learning disabilities. Diagnostic testing will be done, remediation support services will be provided and class monitoring and advocacy will be part of the program. At this point our program is too new to determine scope of services. We will purposely be limiting enrollment to 5-8 students.

What Makes Our Program Unique

We have a three year transitional training program. Our students are involved in either a child care program or a business program. Our students are paid during the internship. In their second year, they participate in a six to eight hour internship with rest of time spent in classes. In their third year they are involved in a work study program three days a week and two days per week are spent in classes. 40% of our students takes courses at New York Institute of Technology.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Para-Educator Center was the first school 25 years ago to establish a program to meet the needs of the population. Because of our small enrollment and the structure of the program, our students receive the support that enables them to live an independent life.

What Makes Our Program Unique

RIT offers over 200 academic program options to choose from. The majority of these programs are of a scientific, engineering, or technology type, and many are very unique within American higher education. Due to the nature of these programs, a "hands on" or applied approach to education is taken and quantitative skills are often more important than verbal skills in academic success at RIT. These factors (and others) make RIT very attractive to students with learning disabilities.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Our Learning Skills Lab is for remediation of basic skills and is open to Jefferson Technical College students and the community at large. Only a small percentage of Lab participants are diagnosed as Learning Disabled. We do not do any diagnosis of learning disabilities, even though one of our staff members is certified in learning disabilities. Each student's program is developed on an individual basis according to his or her needs.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The Office for Disability Services, in addition to having counselors who work directly with students with learning disabilities, also has a multi-disciplinary team that consists of a psychologist and diagnostician/speech and hearing specialist. Many of the support services available to our students are in one facility. We have a computer lab and individual test studios for exam administration. There are no special courses or admission requirements for our students. They are expected to be as competitive as their peers with the use of appropriate and available accommodations.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The L.D. student at Sinclair is expected to be his/her own advocate. The student arranges with professors and tutorial services any accommodations he/she will need. The L.D. Specialist acts as a coach, intervening with professors only when necessary. The specialist also plans with the student a strategy for successful learning at Sinclair

What Makes Our Program Unique

We do not have a formal, professionally-staffed LD program but do try to provide the greatest possible assistance to those students who come to us with diagnosed learning disabilities. The personnel of the Personal Development Learning Center (PDLC) and the teaching faculty work cooperatively, seeking to provide the kinds of experiences in the most flexible environment that will allow the student to complete his/her program goals successfully.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Program emphasizes self-advocacy; support services as necessary; advocacy and education staff; high tech center for cognitive/word processing training. Our goal is to assist each individual to maximize his or her potential and to help the student become as competitive as posssible. Our hopes are that the students will utilize the support services to a lesser degree as college success skills improve.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The Special Services Project at Oregon State University serves approximately 40 LD students. Services provided are: counseling/advising; tutoring; access to development classes in writing, math, study skills, and personal adjustment; access to a computer laboratory with word processing capability; and a comprehensive alternative testing program. There is also a class in Mind Mapping designed specifically for LD students which includes an alternative notetaking procedure as well as strategies for building self esteem. Individual student advocacy is handled by the Director as needed.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The "program" at this point is barely beginning - it mostly involves identification of problems, suggestions for learning or test-taking, and slight modifications in the classroom. Much more education of college faculty and administration and additional resources are needed before we really have a program for LD students. We've only had a few identified LD students.

What Makes Our Program Unique

All students who participate in the Alternative Learners Project participate in regular college classes. In most cases, they take a carefully selected, reduced credit load each semester. Because of the reduced credit load, it is likely that participants in ALP will spend more than the standard eight semesters earning a degree. Only full-time students are eligible for ALP.

What Makes Our Program Unique

LSP works as part of the Center for Counseling and Academic Development. As such the students have access to one LD specialist, 10 counselors, and 20 tutors (both peer and professional). Our school is small, and we are able to provide LD students with the individual attention they need to be mainstreamed successfully.

What Makes Our Program Unique

We work with and support all students. We have about 10 L.D. students now, however our students' grades range from 3.2 - 1.00. We work with all students to meet their academic goals. We are locally funded (students' fees). We welcome L.D. students, but they must take the same courses as others. Our service is supportive, our faculty cooperative, but we have no special technical aids. We assist students on an individual basis.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Our program at Northern State University is trying to refine a program for identifying such students. The faculty has been very helpful in the referral process. Services that have been incorporated are: tutoring, counseling, individual conferences with instructors, talking books, use of Reading Lab and Writing Lab, and instructional and test taking modifications. This is our first year and we are happy that the college will see the benefit of the program and include funding for next year.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The uniqueness of the program is that it is brand new and that we are trying to develop the curriculum. Presently we are on a limited budget and hopefully, with hard work and the receiving of grant money, our program will expand substantially to better accommodate persons with learning disabilities as well as all disabilities. Persons with learning disabilities are one of our primary concerns as they make up the largest percentage of disabled students on campus.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The only program of its kind in Texas, the LD program of Richland College allows its students the option of registering in classes designed to meet their special needs. The LD curriculum includes instruction in basic reading, writing, and spelling skills; written expression; motivation and organization; multisensory math; career planning; and study skills. For students who need only minimal modification of courses in the regular college curriculum, Richland provides a full range of special services to augment regular classroom instruction.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Burlington College is a small, non-traditional school. It is the structure of education primarily that makes it appropriate for students with learning disabilities: small classes; individualized education; few tests; various modes of instruction. The L.D. program is quite small and part of Student Support Services, but it is very personalized and provides tutoring, counseling, advocacy, and support.

Majors

What Makes Our Program Unique

Landmark College is an associate degree-granting institution which is exclusively for dyslexic or specific learning disabled students. Its goal is to prepare students to enter or return to non-specialized, bachelor degree-granting colleges or universities. Admission to Landmark College is based on a diagnosis of dyslexia or other specific learning disability, average to above-average intelligence, absence of primary emotional or behavioral disturbances, and high motivation to undertake the program.

What Makes Our Program Unique

The Learning Disability Program is administered through Project EXCEL. It has only been in existence for one year, so new things are being added as requested and available. Tutoring, notetaking, scribes, oral tests, untimed tests, and alternate locations on testing are the major services now along with testing for the diagnosis of students. There is no charge for the services available. Special application to Project EXCEL is required along with documentation of the disability.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Our program offers assistance to any student who is disadvantaged or handicapped. "Learning disability" ,as our definition words it, is a handicapping condition. We do not require psychological reports to verify that a student has a learning disability before he or she can enter our program. Students may come in and identify themselves or they may be referred by instructors or community agencies as perhaps having some learning disabilities.

What Makes Our Program Unique

Our program is individualized to meet the support needs of LD students. Students are most successful who know the supports they need and can advocate for themselves. Small teacher-student ratio (approximatley 1-30) means faculty are open and supportive to all students. Math and Writing Labs as well as one-on-one peer tutoring and LD support is available.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We offer academic support services, state-of-the art instructional technology, and peer tutoring to assist individual students in reaching their highest academic potentials. Since over two-thirds of JSU students are serviced yearly, no student is labeled by others who seek Center services. Intensive academic support offered to learning disabled students includes academic advising, advocacy, coordination with funding agencies, assistance in making accommodations, computer-assisted instruction, and tutoring.

What Makes Our Services Unique

For students identified as learning disabled we provide specialized tutoring. Our Disabled Student Services also provides advocacy and individual counseling. Student aides are available to serve as scribes or note takers. The Coordinator for Disabled Student Services will work with faculty when special accommodations are necessary. We are in the process of developing a program to provide assessment for learning disabilities, special workshops for LD students, and materials for faculty and staff.

What Makes Our Services Unique

There is no formal LD program at NAU at this time. Some special services are available on an as-needed basis and include individual and group tutoring in academic areas and study skills. All program services are supplied by volunteers and interns. There is no charge. Approximately 65 students are currently identified as LD. All students must meet the same general admission requirements and exceptions as the general population. Students who may need special services are urged to contact the Disabled Student Coordinator at least 3 months prior to start of the semester.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We have a remedial/developmental program to remediate basic writing skills, reading skills, elementary algebra, and study skills. This is not specifically for LD students, although several LD students have been placed in the program. We also have a separate Learning Assistance Center which offers tutoring, study skills, and help for LD students. The Learning Assistance Center is open to all students who desire help.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We serve LD students through Student Support Services. The SSS Director attempts to educate faculty with LD students enrolled in their classes and secures extended test time and alternate means of testing. We furnish free tutoring and readers. In order to be served, LD students must provide special certification of their disability.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Students applying for special admission are expected to be well-motivated, grounded in basic skills, and have developed successful compensatory strategies. To be considered for special admission status, an applicant must apply and be denied admission through the normal application procedure. Our faculty is supportive of the reasonable accomodations needed for L.D. students. We accept students with deficits as long as they meet our admissions requirements. Our tutorial program is based on content areas.

What Makes Our Services Unique

College does not have a formal LD program for its students, but LD students qualified for admission have come, have graduated, and one at least served as President of the Association of Students. Raskob Learning Institute on the college campus is owned by the college but operates separately. It provides for fees, diagnostic testing, and individual or group remediation. College faculty are willing to accommodate LD students with arrangements for tape recorders and longer testing time.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We attempt to provide individualized services based on assessment. All services are optional and students must request them. We do advise them of appropriate services upon their enrollment in the program. Because our class enrollments are fairly small, individualized attention from faculty is easily available to students.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We provide (locate and fund) academic support services to approximately 75 students with learning disabilities. Our service is personal and relatively easy to obtain and utilize. Our campus is devoted to undergraduate education, historically with fewer than 10,000 students. Learning disabled students are responsible for arranging their own tutoring in subject area with peers who have participated in a tutoring orientation program.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Briarwood College does not have an LD program; however, we do serve LD students. Because of our intimate size and student/ faculty ratio, we can usually assess a student's strengths and weaknesses and then help him or her to select an appropriate program. We also have our own test center. We can substitute courses and modify the program, particulary in non-degree programs.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We offer a number of services for students with specific learning disabilities who qualify for regular admissions. Services are provided through the Academic Studies Assistance Program (ASAP). ASAP is able to deliver state of the art assistance as a part of the research and development mission of the program. Many ASAP services are available to all university students who seek to improve their learning. The special services for learning handicapped students are one part of the larger program. The ASAP staff works closely with learning handicapped students in conjunction with academic departments and other service units.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Chipola Junior College is a very small school. We have been able to individualize our services thus far to meet our student's needs. What we lack in staff and material resources is balanced by an informal but very close interaction between faculty and students. Chipola is one of the few community colleges in Florida with a dormitory.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We do not have a formal L.D. Program. Our program for disabled students would best be described as supportive. All disabled students are encouraged to utilize the full array of services and programs offered by the university. Disabled Students are encouraged to register with the Services for the Handicapped Office as soon as they arrive on campus. A handbook describing the program and services will be provided on request.

What Makes Our Services Unique

A student with a diagnosed learning disability is eligible for all services provided by Student Support Services. The support given by our program is found in the areas of academic tutoring, personal and academic counseling, cultural enrichment through periodic cultural trips, and various other areas of support. We offer a course called Coping for College Students which covers any deficits students may have. The Student Support Services Program at South Georgia College is not, however, designed specifically, and/or exclusively, for the learning disabled student.

What Makes Our Services Unique

The College of Idaho does not have a true LD program. It does offer assistance for minimal disabilities by allowing extended time for exam writing, tape recorders in class, etc. Arrangements can be made for tutoring. The Study Skills coordinator is available for assistance with general study assistance and tutoring. The college is not equipped for the physcially handicapped. Because of the low faculty/student ratio, factuly is available to give assistance.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Kendall in essence does not have a learning disability program. The "Freshman Year Program" is designed for high school grads who are not quite prepared for general education courses. Some of these students might have learning disabilities. After this term of reading, writing, and math fundamentals, the student's classes are completely mainstreamed. The main thing Kendall stresses is individual attention from faculty and staff.

What Makes Our Services Unique

S.A.I.C. does not have an LD Program per se. We do have two trained and experienced LD specialists on staff to offer the support services listed to those students who identify themselves as L.D. and who actively seek help for themselves. We work in the context of a Learning Center which is available to our entire school population.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Indiana Institute of Technology is a small college which specializes in providing individulized attention to meet the unique needs of each of our students. Although our size prohibits offering a comprehensive program for Learning Disabled Students, we are able to provide services for such students on an individually prescribed basis. Several campus buildings however pre-date governmentally prescribed access standards and are not accessible for the student with significant physical disability.

General Information

4 year Private College. Urban campus of 25 acres. Accessible by air, train, bus. Ski areas are 3 hour from campus and beaches are 2 hours. What Makes Our Services Unique

Assistance to learning disabled students is available through Student Support Services, a U.S. Dept. of Education Title IV program for disadvantaged and disabled students. Indiana University East, a small commuter campus of the IU System, offers disabled students the advantage of remaining in their home community while they make the major academic and social adjustment associated with the higher education experience. IU East's friendly atmosphere can provide disabled students with the personal service and attention they may require.

What Makes Our Services Unique

The Skills Advancement Program provides classes and tutoring services for special needs students. The class and programs are mainstreamed with the general population. We do not have specific classes for students with learning disabilities, but we work with vocational rehabilitation to provide the best placement for students. In addition, we offer a support group for students with disabilities and work to provide services on an individual level.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Our program is limited to a small number of students. The students are mainstreamed full time. The unique feature of our program is the learning disability support group that meets one hour every two weeks. The group listens, supports, and provides training where necessary (assertiveness, study techniques, etc.)

What Makes Our Services Unique

Student Support Services is funded by a federal Dept. of Education TRIO grant. The services are personalized to meet the needs of each student based upon the needs prescribed by the professional who diagnosed the learning disability. In addition, each new student is assigned a Peer Advocate Group during orientation week. These groups are designed to assist students in making the ajustment to college life.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We do not have a learning disability program. We do have a Learning Skills Center which provides remedial help for students who score low on the ACT and SAT. Students must test out after one year. It is possible to test out after a semester. Credits earned count as electives toward graduation, but do not fulfill the basic Math and English requirements.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We do not have a comprehensive program for students with learning disabilities. We do, however, make reasonable efforts to accommodate this important group of students. For special consideration in admissions and to verify the need for support services, a psychoeducational report less than three years old along with other supportive documentation is required.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Services are based on the needs of an individual student, not program requirements. Independent students can be fully mainstreamed yet when help is needed, they know where to come.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Hagerstown Junior College is a small community college unique in its ability to provide individual attention to its students. We provide numerous support services to our students who are learning disabled. Each LD student meets with our Handicapped Program Coordinator to assess his or her individual needs. Every student is encouraged to learn the skills necessary to become his or her own advocate.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Although Towson State does not have a learning disability program, we do offer support services through our Handciapped Student Services Office. These services include note-taking, tutoring, remedial assistance in reading, writing and math, extra time on exams and assignments, tape recorded textbooks, a Learning Center, interpreters, counseling, oral exams, and a Writing Lab. Also, special consideration is given in admission when documented proof of disability is provided by school psychologist.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Brandeis University encourages students with learning disabilities who have achieved strong secondary school records to apply for admission. All services for learning disabled students are coordinated through the Office of Academic Affairs under the supervision of an assistant dean. Each student is advised on an individual basis in terms of course selection and any special services he or she may require, such as books or tape recorders in class, or waivers of certain academic requirements.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We do not have a program, only support services for students with disabilities. Each faculty has a faculty coordinator of services for students with disabilities. Services are decentralized.

* Tutoring is for all students.

What Makes Our Services Unique

The college can coordinate a student program of accommodations based on a recent diagnosis of learning disabilities, but we have no speical L.D. services or programs. Therefore, we encourage applications for L.D. students who have well-developed compensatory skills which have enabled them to be successful in traditional academic curricula.

*Tutoring is on an individual basis.

What Makes Our Services Unique

The Learning Resource Center has a staff of four full-time professional tutors, including the director. Two are trained to assist learning disabled students. A math tutor and a writing tutor are also available. We service all students, not just learning disabled students, on an individual basis. Students refe themselves and are also referred by faculty and Dean's office. When students indentify themselves as LD, we work with them, often on a weekly basis. We help them to develop the skills and strategies they need to make the transition to college. We do not have a program specifically for LD students but offer tutoring and support to these students and coordinate the accommodations.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We do not have a formal LD program. Occasionally, we will admit a student with a learning disability who is mainstreamed who meets the regular admission criteria- and may only have need for occasional help. Our Supportive Instructional Service (SIS) offers tutoring, workshops in study skills and counseling to the general population of students.

What Makes Our Services Unique

WPI does not have a specific program for learning disabled students. Being a small school, we do not actually have many L.D. applicants. We have, however, adopted a policy to accommodate learning disabled students (with untimed tests, reduced course loads, etc.) specific to their disabilities. L.D. students may work out these special circumstances with the Director of Academic Advising, on a case by case basis.

*Tutoring is available for all students.

What Makes Our Services Unique

The learning disabilities program at Adrian College develops an individualized educational plan with each student based on admissions data, standardized tests, the psychological report, campus placement testing, and career interest and personality inventories. Following development of the plan, students meet with counselors regularly and/or as needed to assess academic progress and implementation of personal goals.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Our efforts to assist learning disabled students are housed in the Academic Achievement Center, which has been in existence at Aquinas for nearly ten years. Its role has been to assist students on a one-to-one basis, whatever the need. For the last several years the center has been assuming a more active role in identifying and assisting students with learning disabilities.

What Makes Our Services Unique

There is not a specific program for learning disabled students at CMU. LD students are encouraged to self-identify and be their own advocates. There are classes offered in reading and study skills for the learning disabled students. Central's tutoring system is very effective, and LD students may use a tutor for up to two classes for any semester. There are no special admissions procedure for LD students at Central.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We do not have a program targeted at L.D. students. We offer notetaking, readers, taped text books, group and individual tutoring, tape recorders, and much more. We have remedial labs which allow students to develop special skills. Students have an advocate to help them chose instructors and courses.

What Makes Our Services Unique

The primary support services for Special Needs students consist of providing tutors for vocational/non-vocational, academically disadvantaged students. An additional support component involves support assessment followed by assigning services or recommending other support services on campus or within the community. Scheduled courses are offered in skill development, i.e. reading, writing, math, and study skills.

What Makes Our Services Unique

L.D. students on campus are encouraged to use the Learning Assistance Center to its maximum. The center is equipped with computers and word processors. The staff works one-on-one and in small classes in selected areas of study. Peer tutoring is also an advantage at Hibbing Community College. Very basic skills courses are available in math, English and reading.

What Makes Our Services Unique

At St. Johns and our coordinate institution, the College of St. Benedict, the Academic Advising Office is responsible for providing the kind of assistance that will improve opportunities for our LD students. Generally only those with a moderate LD apply to a college like ours. The programs at our schools do not provide remedial services but only essential accommodations, as required by federal regulations.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We seek to provide services that meet the needs of LD students holistically. First, in addressing academic needs, students can receive the services of a learning disabilities specialist, a peer-tutor, and a writing lab instructor. Academic advising and advocacy are also provided. Second, in addressing the social/ emotional needs, students are encouraged to take advantage of the career counseling, amd campus ministry services when appropriate. Finally, the LD student is directed toward campus activities, such as school clubs, social events, and community service projects. Thus the student is supported in a multi-dimensional fashion, with an integration of services.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Dartmouth does not have a formal program for learning disabled students. That is, the College does not have a learning disabilities remedial specialist or tutor, nor does it have special classes or programs for learning disabled students. A learning disabled student at Dartmouth takes the normal load of courses, although a reduced course load is possible at no tuition reduction. In general, learning disabled high school students are admitted to Dartmouth with the understanding that they are and will be able to perform well academically at the College without special conditions.

What Makes Our Services Unique

NHTC Laconia was the first of the seven system colleges to provide services specifically for LD students. We have no separate program for LD students; rather, all our students receive a quality education, regardless of disability. The small size of our college helps provide an active, informal system. We are all here for each other.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We work wilh all types of disabilities. If a student self-discloses his disability, an individual program is designed to help the student with his/her needs. UNH has 2 support services: TASK and ACCESS. TASK assists students with study skills, reading, and written expression. ACCESS is concerned with faculty awareness and classroom modifications for students. We set up whatever is most reasonable to insure our students' success.

What Makes Our Services Unique

The Learning Support Services or LSS offers one-to-one tutoring which is focused on learning strategies rather than content areas and is implemented in conjunction with content area tutoring. Examples of specific learning strategies include the development of listening skills, memory, general reading, writing, and spelling strategies, communication skills, time management, note-taking, test-taking, organizational and social interaction skills.

What Makes Our Services Unique

HCCC offers services appropriate for each learning disabled student rather than programming. Students are served by a full-time LD Specialist who is a member of the College Learning Center staff. Opportunity for the student to access all of the special features of the Learning Center is encouraged by this arrangement. Student self-advocacy and independence skills are a high priority. Also stressed is faculty awareness of LD issues, and the LD specialist maintains rapport with the college faculty and staff to facilitate increased awareness and understanding.

What Makes Our Services Unique

At the moment we have no formal program with a special curriculum for LD students. We do, however, offer special services to students with a learning disability. We ask that these individuals be thoroughly tested and the results sent to the school indicating the interventions suggested for these students to help them academically while at Houghton College. We attempt to work with faculty and arrange to implement as many of these interventions as possible for each student.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We do not advertise our services as a Learning Disability Program because, although we do offer a number of support services, we do not provide diagnostic testing such as the WAIS-R. We work closely with our Learning Assistance Center staff, the Coordinator for Tutorial Services and faculty to provide our LD students with quality support.

What Makes Our Services Unique

At the present time, Niagara University does not have a program for learning disabled students. We do, however, have a number of learning disabled students who receive support through our learning center and appropriate accommodations in classes and test taking are provided.

* Tutoring is available for all students not only those who have been identified as having a learning disability.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We do not have a learning disability program in place. Our office consists of the coordinator. We are tyring to bring in a part-time LD specialist. Also, we're implementing an Orientation Program for LD students during the summer of 1990. There is a part time advisor who will be assisting students with disabilities with their schedules and helping with exams.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Skidmore does not offer a formal program for learning disabled students. Applicants who identify a learning disability during the admissions process are considered for admission on the same competitive basis as other applicants. If it is clear that a candidate's record of achievement and potential for success in a rigorous liberal arts curriculum compare favorably to the very keen competition for admission, that student will be admitted without regard to his or her handicap.

What Makes Our Services Unique

St. Lawrence University is committed to providing accommodation services to students with learning challenges. We have a clear, strong policy, and are working for a "Bill of Rights" for disabled students. The director works with faculty to bring about cooperative and collaborative behaviors when dealing with stduents' needs. Students are encouraged to self-identify, and self-advocacy is the goal of services rendered. The Director facilitates communication between faculty and students which enhances the education process. Our rural location, and small student-teacher ratio is ideal for students with learning challenges.

What Makes Our Services Unique

After admission, to be eligible for Learning Disabled Student Services, students must request services and submit documentation of their learning disability in the form of a psychoeducational report not more than three years old. The documentation serves two purposes. It justifies to the institution the need for accommodations and serves as a guide to optimal services for the individual student.

What Makes Our Services Unique

The services for learning disabled students at Isothermal Community College are rather unique for a two year college in western N. Carolina. Much of the funds and all personnel are provided through a US Dept. of Education grant for Student Support Services. Serving LD students is one of our goals. Our developmental education instructor and counselors double in services to LD students. We are able to assist LD students from initial inquiry.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Services are available on an individual basis. OSU-Newark is a 2 year school, except for elementary majors, and is a good environment in which to get started on a 4 year degree. Class size is smaller and professors are more available to students when compared to a larger campus. Professors are aware of learning disabilities and make every effort to meet individual student needs.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Tulsa Junior College provides comprehensive services for the disabled student through the Diagnostic and Prescriptive Learning Center located on the Metro Campus. Disabled Students are strongly encouraged to contact the Diagnostic Center for help with special needs. In addition to meeting the needs of students, the Diagnostic Center staff acts as a resource for faculty, staff, and various community and state agencies.

*Students take name from a posted list of tutors and make their own arrangements.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We do not have an LD specialist or staff. We offer support services for all students. Usually, a student with mild learning disabilities will be successful here and find support through our faculty, peer tutoring, and reading/writing labs. The faculty member is the one who decides which aid/services he/she is willing to render or allow.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We have no formalized LD program. Services are provided through 2 offices, Disabled Student Services and Academic Learning Services. Because the program is not "structured", most LD students who come here need to be self-directed and not require much supervision.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Our Learning Disability Program basically is a component of our Learning Center which offers assistance to all students referred to the center or who request services from the center. Penn State's University Park Campus provides LD testing for us. Once testing results are available, our Learning Center, within the limits of its services, works with LD students. LD students need to be responsible for their learning.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Our program is best described as developmental learning. We use peer tutors to aid those who need it and we work on a referral basis with the other instructors. We have used basic skills tests to initiate students with difficulties in math, meading and English skills into our developmental classes. Unfortunately, these tests will no longer be used as of 9/90.

What Makes Our Services Unique

The needs of MTSU students with learning disabilities are served by the concerted efforts of both the Office of Handicapped Student Services and the Office of Developmental Studies. These coordinating bodies distribute information concerning services available to students with disabilities as well as academic deficiencies. These offices also act as advocates for such students at the University, surveying the needs of these students and developing programs to meet those needs.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Presently, Tarleton State University does not have a Learning Disabilities Program per se. We do, however, provide support for students who have learning differences/disabilities in an effort to help them be successful in all their courses. The Director of the Teaching and Learning Center works with these students as they explore various techniques for learning.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We have a transitional class for the learning disabled under the auspices of developmental reading. This class is designed to get at least some of these students together to work on school adjustment as well as to improve reading. We read about and discuss such things as: what are learning disabilities, how to study, and self advocacy. Thus we combine reading, improvement, and counseling for the disabled. We have found no other such program in the state.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We do not have a specific L.D. program. Students with documented learning disabilities individualize a program that is coordinated through Student Support Services which is primarily a program for students needing developmental assistance to succeed in college. Based on the learning disability, students may have readers, note takers, extended test time or tests given orally, or other services which can be arranged with instructors.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We are a small 2- year school which is often a good way for students to bridge the gap between high school and a 4-year college. We try to treat each student as unique, meeting his or her individual needs. Our counselors assess students individually on time management and learning strategies.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We do not have a Learning Disability Student Center; we work with each student individually. Once a student is accepted to GMU, we ask him or her to provide us with documentation with regard to their disability and limitations. From then on we are in contact with them each semester through registration and newsletters as well as through services required.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Students must meet the same criteria for admissions to programs as all other students. Students must supply appropriate written documentation of their learning disability in order to access services. Each student is considered an individual, and services are provided and planned on that basis. Course alternatives can be arranged when appropriate. Negotiations with instructors are arranged at the student's request. Registered learning disabled students receive priority registration to ensure workable academic schedules.

What Makes Our Services Unique

It is hard to make a statement about a program that is still being organized. We are working to build a team process to include each student's subject teachers in IEP development. We are forming a service area task force of secondary school and agency representatives to guide our program's development.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Patrick Henry Community College serves learning disabled students through the Student Support Services Program. A student must notify us of his or her handicap and apply to the program. Services are provided based on their handicapping condition. Presently, we hire peer tutors and notetakers for LD students. We do have a part-time LD specialist - approximatley 10 hours per week. Also, in August, 1990, a counselor with extensive experience with working with LD students will begin full-time.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Students with learning disabilities are registered with the Disabled Student Services Office by presenting testing documentation completed within the last 4 years. Students are then eligible for support services tailored to meet their individual needs. Although there is no structured program, the student is encouraged to meet with the coordinator on a regular basis to provide consistency to support services.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Our program is not clinically based. We work only with students who have experienced a regular classroom environment. We offer only support services to all students. There is no one area where they must go but we do all of our programming out of the Student Assistance Center. We serve the LD student who needs basic support for study skills development, reinforcement of positive academic discipline, self-discipline, and confidence building.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Student Support Services works with a variety of students, including LD, so no labels are attached to utilizing services. Students are selected by federal guidelines to participate, but once selected, participation is voluntary. There are two certified counselors who also serve as Director and Tutor Coordinator, a Learning Specialist who is currently certified as a School Psychologist, and a secretary. Peer tutoring is available, but most LD students receive individualized staff tutoring.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Learning disabled students are mainstreamed into all aspects of college life. Accommodation is made on an individual basis according to the "what works" method. The faculty is generally anxious to accommodate individual learning styles and to try anything that is reasonable. The coordinator of Special Needs is learning disabled herself, so she has many experiences of her own to draw upon.

What Makes Our Services Unique

Fundamental to our approach in assisting students with learning disabilities: 1.) Based on reasonable accommodation; 2.) Design based on individaul interview and student self-monitoring; 3.) Focus is on student's independence; 4.) We do not change standards for academic achievement but we can adjust the ways of meeting those standards.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We do not have a formal program. We offer services to the L.D. student (and to other handicapped students). We attempt to help the student obtain an education in spite of learning disabilities by taping books, giving extended time, advocating and counseling.

What Makes Our Services Unique

We provide intensive individual assessment and program modification based on the needs of the student. Our PEP, Personal Education Preparation I, had its pre-orientation this summer so that students could prepare themselves for college by taking classes and learning how to record notes in class, while the faculty had the opportunity to better understand these student's style of learning.
